

Island Health is looking for an Electroneurophysiology Technologist to join our team at Nanaimo General Regional Hospital.

Situated in one of the most naturally beautiful parts of Canada, Island Health delivers the full spectrum of health care and support services to over 860,000 people across Vancouver Island and adjacent coastal communities.

Nanaimo is located centrally on Vancouver Island's east coast, boasting endless hiking and biking trails, plenty of amenities and recreational opportunities. Walk along the waterfront or enjoy browsing local shops in the Old City Quarter.

Reporting to the Supervisor, Electrodiagnostic Services, and working in a computerized environment, the Electroneurophysiology (ENP) Technologist performs multi-disciplinary electroneurophysiological (ENP) tests, including electroencephalograms, evoked potentials, electronystagmograms, and nerve conduction studies.

You will also perform tasks assigned by physicians in the execution of electromyographs.

Some of our positions are eligible for an exceptional employer-paid benefits package including dental and prescription coverage, group life, long term disability and extensive extended health plan, and paid time off.
